downward from its hips to its neck.
Apatosaurus's body was a little like a suspension bridge. On a suspension bridge, the roadway hangs from wire cables attached to high towers.

On Apatosaurus, the stomach, heart, lungs, and chest muscles hung from its shoulders. The shoulders were like the towers of the suspension bridge. They held up the biggest part of the animal.

The heaviest part of Apatosaurus was its middle, between its front legs and tail.
